The future will demand much of the mothers of posterity; much more than has been required of those of the past, be cause the knowledge of the present day is far in advance of the knowledge in the days of our fathers and mothers. The education of every son and daughter of the land is chiefly the work of their mothers; the least observation will convince any one of this fact. Fathers are so aborbed in business, in the family support, that the entire onus of the family's culture is laid upon the mother. From a long exthe fact that if the school pleases the mother, the father is satisfied to pay the bills, and thinks duty ends with the financial

Appropriations by Democrats for the three

During the second session of the Fortyfourth Congress no appropriation was made for the army, but the necessary appropriation was voted at the called session of the Forty-fifth Congress. This will explain the the smallness of the appropriations made for the fiscal year ending June 30,
